Further reports following the London Bridge and Borough Market attacks on Saturday. Includes coverage of the Archbishop of Canterbury Justin Welby's interview with BBC Radio 4 Today programme (see News from the Archbishop of Canterbury, above) and his attendance later yesterday at a vigil led by the Mayor of London Sadiq Khan to pay respects to the victims of the attack. Archbishop Justin and the Bishop of Southwark, Christopher Chessun, were pictured alongside other faith leaders including the Chief Rabbi Ephraim Mirvis and Bishop Angaelos, General Bishop of the Coptic Orthodox Church in the UK arriving at the vigil. The BBC report highlights Archbishop Justin's remarks to the Today programme about religious literacy. Other newspapers focus on his remarks that religious leaders must take responsibility for tackling actions taken in the name of faith. The Church Times reports his comments that if the attack leads to a rise in anti-Muslim sentiment that terrorists will have won. ITV and Christian Today report on prayers at Winchester Cathedral for the Thy Kingdom Come service.
