Church of England failed child victims of sexual abuse while 'colluding' with disgraced bishop, report finds

The Independent

The Church of England “concealed” evidence of child abuse by a former bishop stretching over two decades, the Archbishop of Canterbury, Justin Welby, has said, following a major independent review. Read the full story

Reports on publication yesterday (see above) of independent review by Dame Moira Gibb into the Church's handling of the Bishop Peter Ball case. Reports focus on the criticisms made in the report of Lord Carey and note the Archbishop of Canterbury, Justin Welby, has written to him asking him to consider his position as an honorary assistant bishop in Oxford diocese. The Archbishop's statement is also quoted in most articles (also see above) along with CofE's lead safeguarding bishop, Peter Hancock.

ITV/Premier

Reports of remarks by the Archbishop of Canterbury in the House of Lords yesterday in which he said the response from the emergency services and civic society to the Grenfell Tower fire had been remarkable. But he said support from the state for those urgently and desperately in need had been inadequate – and that this failure was ultimately a ‘failure in values’.

Reports of remarks by the mother of seven-year-old Katie Rough at the unveiling of a memorial bench in the city to her daughter. The article mentions that her family and friends will take part in the Great North Run later this year in honour of causes supported by the Archbishop of York, who they say has been a great support to them. A 15-year-old girl has been charged with Katie's murder and faces trial next month.
